well being- constructing and reconstructing the childhood One of the major objectives of sociology of children is enhancing and improving child's well being. Well-being here may refer to various ingredients of childhood that includes the material conditions, development of relationship of a child with family, friends and teachers, physical and mental health and facing the fears of life.

Constructing and Reconstructing Childhood The twentieth century is said to be 'century of the child' and perhaps at no other time have children been so highly profiled. The ideology of the child-centred society gives 'the child' and 'the interests of the child' a prominent place in the policy and practices of legal, welfare, medical and educational institutions.
